

Internal Appeals

Introduction

1. This Guideline provides information and explains the steps to be followed if a party wishes to appeal from a decision of a Division to the Internal Appeal Panel of NCAT. Attachment A is a diagram giving a general overview of the appeal process.
2. The Guideline also identifies some of the alternatives to an appeal that might be applicable in various circumstances.

What can be done on an internal appeal?

3. On an internal appeal from a final decision, the Appeal Panel can consider whether the Tribunal which originally heard the proceedings made an error on a question of law. The Appeal Panel may also consider, if it gives permission or 'leave', whether any other error was made in reaching the original decision. If there has been an error on a question of law or the Appeal Panel gives leave and finds that there has been any other error, orders may be made to correct a material error.
4. Generally, an appeal is not an opportunity to have a "second go" at a hearing.
5. Parties to an appeal are not usually allowed to rely on evidence that was not given to the Tribunal at the original hearing.

What decisions are internally appealable?

6. In general terms, s 32 of the Civil and Administrative Tribunal Act 2013 (the Act) has the effect of allowing parties to appeal, or to seek permission or 'leave' to appeal, to an NCAT Appeal Panel from:
 - (a) most decisions made in the Administrative and Equal Opportunity Division;
 - (b) decisions made in the Guardianship Division;
 - (c) decisions made in the Occupational Division relating to occupations licensed by State law and regulated by State authorities. (For example decisions in relation to home building, motor trade, real estate agent and other licences administered by NSW Fair Trading; decisions in relation to security industry licences and commercial and private inquiry agents licences administered by the Commissioner of Police; decisions in relation to passenger transport licences administered by Roads and Maritime Services; decisions in relation to tow truck driving and operator authorities);
 - (d) decisions made in the Consumer and Commercial Division (but cl 12 of Sch 4 to the Act restricts appeals from this Division in a number of ways);

- (e) decisions of a registrar that are declared to be appealable decisions.

What decisions are not appealable?

7. The following decisions are not internally appealable:
 - (a) decisions made in the Administrative and Equal Opportunity Division under certain legislation listed in cl 15 of Sch 3 to the Act;
 - (b) decisions made in the Occupational Division relating to the following professions: medical practitioners, health professionals (nurses, psychologists, physiotherapists and similar professions), legal practitioners, veterinary practitioners, architects, registered surveyors, accredited certifiers and decisions made under certain other legislation listed in cl 29 of Sch 5 to the Act;
 - (c) decisions in proceedings for the exercise of the Tribunal's enforcement jurisdiction;
 - (d) decisions of the Tribunal in proceedings for the imposition of a civil penalty in exercise of its general jurisdiction;
 - (e) decisions of a Division in an external appeal; and
 - (f) decisions of the internal Appeal Panel.
8. There are also exclusions and variations under some of the divisional schedules to the Act and in some of the specific laws giving jurisdiction to NCAT.
9. Some Tribunal decisions that are not subject to an internal appeal may be appealed to the Supreme Court, the Land and Environment Court or the Court of Appeal. A decision of the Guardianship Division may be appealed either to the Appeal Panel or the Supreme Court but not to both.
10. Parties should always check whether a decision is appealable to the Appeal Panel before lodging an internal appeal.
11. Some relevant extracts from the Act relating to internal appeals from NCAT decisions can be found at Attachment B to this Guideline.

Alternatives to an appeal

12. An appeal may not always be the most appropriate course when there is a difficulty or problem with a decision of the Tribunal.
13. As an alternative to appealing, a party can:
 - (a) ask the Tribunal to set aside the decision (under reg 9 of the Civil and Administrative Tribunal Regulation 2022) where:
 - (i) all the parties consent to this course; or
 - (ii) the decision was made in the absence of a party and the Tribunal is satisfied that the party's absence has resulted in the party's case not being adequately put to the Tribunal;

- (b) ask the Tribunal to set aside proceedings or a decision (under s 53(4) of the Act) where there has been a failure to comply with provisions of the Act or the procedural rules in relation to commencement or conduct of the proceedings;
- (c) ask the Tribunal to correct an obvious error in a decision or the reasons for decision (under s 63 of the Act). Examples of obvious errors are:
 - (i) an obvious clerical or typographical error in the decision or reasons;
 - (ii) an error arising from an accidental slip or omission;
 - (iii) a defect in form; and
 - (iv) an inconsistency between the orders and the reasons for decision.

Appeal rights vary with types of decision

- 14. Whether a party has a right to appeal against a decision or must request leave to appeal varies depending on whether the decision is a final decision, an ancillary decision or an interlocutory decision. Classifying a decision as final, ancillary or interlocutory is not always easy. In the end, it is a matter to be decided by the Appeal Panel.
- 15. Generally, a final decision is one that determines the outcome of proceedings. It can also be thought of as any decision that is not an ancillary or interlocutory decision.
- 16. An interlocutory decision (as defined in s 4(1) of the Act) is a decision concerning any of the following:
 - (a) the granting of a stay or adjournment,
 - (b) the prohibition or restriction of the disclosure, broadcast or publication of matters,
 - (c) the issue of a summons,
 - (d) the extension of time for any matter (including for the lodgment of an application or appeal),
 - (e) an evidential matter,
 - (f) the disqualification of any member,
 - (g) the joinder or misjoinder of a party to proceedings,
 - (h) the summary dismissal of proceedings,
 - (i) any other interlocutory issue before the Tribunal.
- 17. An ancillary decision (as defined in s 4(1) of the Act) is a decision, other than an interlocutory decision, that is preliminary to, or consequential on, a decision determining proceedings. This includes:
 - (a) a decision whether the Tribunal has jurisdiction to deal with a matter, and
 - (b) a decision concerning the awarding of costs in proceedings.

Appeals against final decisions

- 18. Generally, a party has the right to appeal on a question of law against a final decision of the Tribunal. The party does not require leave before such an appeal will be heard.

19. If, however, a party wishes to appeal on any ground other than a question of law against a final decision, the party must obtain leave from the Appeal Panel to do so.
20. The Appeal Panel decides whether an appeal is on a question of law or not. There is no simple test to determine whether an appeal is or is not 'on a question of law'. Parties are encouraged to seek legal advice about this.
21. Where an appellant is legally represented, the appellant is expected (with the assistance of the legal representative) to identify any question(s) of law with some precision, where it is asserted that the Tribunal made an error on one or more questions of law: see e.g. STAR Training Academy Pty Ltd v Commissioner of Police (No 2) [2022] NSWCATAP 98 at [14] – [27]; Theophilas v Chief Commissioner of State Revenue [2018] NSWCATAP 111 at [24].

Appeals against interlocutory decisions

22. For interlocutory decisions it does not matter whether the appeal is on a question of law or other grounds, the Appeal Panel's leave is required in all cases.

Appeals against ancillary decisions

23. A party generally has the right to appeal against an ancillary decision of the Tribunal on a question of law. The Appeal Panel's leave is required to appeal on any ground other than a question of law.

Considerations relevant to being given leave to appeal

24. In deciding whether or not to grant leave to appeal, the Appeal Panel will often consider whether the matter involves issues of principle, questions of public importance or a clear injustice. In addition, the Appeal Panel may take into account the cost to the parties and to the Tribunal and whether it is proportionate to the importance and complexity of the subject matter of the proceedings. General principles in relation to granting leave to appeal were considered in Collins v Urban [2014] NSWCATAP 17 at [80] to [84].

Additional considerations on leave to appeal from decisions of the Consumer and Commercial Division

25. In the case of appeals from the Consumer and Commercial Division where leave is required, cl 12 of Sch 4 to the Act says that leave can only be granted if the Appeal Panel is satisfied that the appellant may have suffered a substantial miscarriage of justice because:
 - (a) the decision was not fair and equitable;
 - (b) the decision was against the weight of the evidence; or
 - (c) significant new evidence has arisen (that was not reasonably available at the time of the original hearing).
26. The operation of these provisions was considered in Collins v Urban [2014] NSWCATAP 17 at [65] to [79].
27. Even if the Appeal Panel is satisfied that one or more of those conditions exist, it still needs to decide whether leave to appeal should be granted.

28. In addition, there is no ability to appeal, except on a question of law, against a decision of the Consumer and Commercial Division where:
- (a) the appellant is a corporation and the appeal relates to a dispute in respect of which the Tribunal had jurisdiction because of the operation of the Credit (Commonwealth Powers) Act 2010; or
 - (b) the appeal is against an order for the termination of a tenancy under the Residential Tenancies Act 2010 and a warrant of possession has been executed in relation to that order.

Representation

29. A party is not automatically entitled to be represented by another person on the hearing of an internal appeal. Leave will be required except where the party was entitled to be represented without leave at the original hearing.
30. A party to an appeal can ask the Appeal Panel to grant leave for a person to represent the party on the appeal at the first directions hearing or at any later time.

Notice of Appeal and asking for leave to appeal

31. If a party wishes to appeal, or ask for leave to appeal, against a decision, the party must complete a Notice of Appeal form. The form is available on the NCAT website or at a Registry. Multiple copies of the form and any attachments must be lodged with the Tribunal. An original and two copies for the Tribunal and one copy for each respondent is required. There should be sufficient copies so that the Tribunal can serve on each respondent a copy of the form and any attachments.
32. The lodging party is called the ‘appellant’. The other parties to the appeal are called ‘respondents’. The respondents are all the other parties to the proceeding in which the decision appealed against was made and also, in certain limited cases, the individuals or bodies referred to in rule 29(c), (d) and (e) of the Civil and Administrative Tribunal Rules 2014.
33. The orders which the appellant is seeking in place of the orders appealed from should be set out in the Notice of Appeal.
34. If leave to appeal is required, there is a section in the Notice of Appeal where appellants should indicate they are applying for leave and explain the reasons why leave to appeal should be given.
35. An application for leave to appeal can be determined at the final hearing of the appeal, at a hearing before the final hearing or “on the papers”, that is, on the basis of written submissions without a hearing under s 50(2) of the Act. In most cases, there will be a hearing but, in case the application is determined “on the papers”, an appellant asking for leave to appeal should give a full statement in the Notice of Appeal of the reasons that the Appeal Panel should give leave to appeal.
36. The question of whether leave to appeal will be given is most often left until the final hearing of the appeal. As a result, at the final hearing the Appeal Panel will usually consider not only whether there have been any errors on questions(s) of law but also whether leave should be given to appeal on grounds that do not involve a question of law.

Time for filing

37. General Rule: The general rule is that the appeal must be lodged within 28 days from either the day on which the appellant was notified of the decision appealed against or the day on which reasons for the decision were first given (either orally or in writing), whichever is later.
38. Residential Proceedings: For residential proceedings, the appeal must be lodged within 14 days either from the day on which the appellant was notified of the decision appealed against or the day on which reasons were first given (either orally or in writing), whichever is later.
39. The relevant enabling legislation may also specify a different time frame for filing a Notice of Appeal. An appellant should refer to the relevant enabling legislation to check whether there is a different time frame.

Extension of time

40. If a Notice of Appeal is lodged outside the relevant time period, the appellant must request an extension of time otherwise the appeal may be dismissed. An application for an extension of time should be made in the Notice of Appeal form. The principles relevant to granting an extension of time were considered in Jackson v NSW Land and Housing Corporation [2014] NSWCATAP 22 at [18] to [22].
41. The Notice of Appeal asks whether the appellant objects to an application for an extension of time being dealt with “on the papers”. The Tribunal may determine an application for an extension of time “on the papers”, without conducting a hearing.
42. If an extension of time is requested but is not granted the appeal will be dismissed because it is out of time. This may be decided before the appeal is heard or it may be left to be decided at the final hearing of the appeal.

Payment of fee

43. A Notice of Appeal will not be treated as properly lodged until the prescribed fee is paid. In certain limited circumstances a registrar may waive the payment of the fee or apply a concessional rate to the fee payable.
44. A party seeking a fee waiver should complete the Fee waiver request form available on the NCAT website or from the Registry. Where the fee is eventually waived, it may be open to the Tribunal to treat a Notice of Appeal as if it had been properly lodged from the date it was first received by the Tribunal even if at that time the fee had not been waived. A party seeking a fee waiver should ask for the Notice of Appeal to be stamped as received on the date it was first given to the Tribunal so that there is a record of that date.

Service of Notice of Appeal

45. When a Notice of Appeal is lodged, the Tribunal will serve on each respondent a copy of the Notice of Appeal and attachments.

46. For further information on service, see NCAT Procedural Direction 1 - Service and Giving Notice available on the NCAT website.

Reply to Appeal

47. A respondent to an appeal should complete and lodge an original and two copies of the Reply to Appeal within 14 days following service of the Notice of Appeal or within the time frame directed by the Tribunal. The Reply to Appeal form is available on the NCAT website or from the Registry.
48. A respondent must serve a copy of the Reply on each appellant before, at the same time or as soon as practicable after lodging the Reply.
49. Where a respondent wants to argue that the orders appealed against were correct but for reasons different from those given by the Tribunal, the respondent should complete the section in the Reply to Appeal which requires the respondent to state whether there are any other reasons why the Tribunal's orders were correctly made.

Cross appeal

50. There is no provision for cross appeals. Where a respondent to an appeal also seeks to have the original orders varied the respondent must lodge a separate Notice of Appeal and pay the prescribed fee. If the respondent has not lodged a Notice of Appeal prior to the expiration of the time for filing of the notice, the respondent must ask the Tribunal for an extension of time. If the Notice of Appeal has been lodged within a short time after the first appeal, that fact may be taken into account when the Tribunal decides whether to give an extension of time.

Application for stay of the decision subject of the appeal

51. Even if an appeal is lodged against a decision, that original decision still operates and can be enforced unless the Tribunal makes an order stopping it being enforced. This type of order is called a 'stay' and can be made under s 43(3) of the Act. The mere lodgement of the Notice of Appeal is insufficient, of itself, to demonstrate that it is an appropriate case to warrant the granting of a stay.
52. An application for a stay order stopping enforcement can be made by filling in and lodging with the Tribunal the form Application for stay of original decision pending appeal which is available on the NCAT website.
53. If a stay has not been granted the successful party may enforce the original orders made by the Tribunal, for example by seeking the issue of a warrant for possession or the certification of a money order.
54. The Tribunal will not make a stay order stopping enforcement just because an appeal has been lodged.
55. In deciding whether or not to make a stay order stopping a decision being enforced, the Tribunal will usually take into account considerations such as the following:

- (a) The party who obtained the original order should generally be allowed to enforce it unless the person asking for the stay can show that there is a good reason why the order should not be enforced.
- (b) A factor which supports staying enforcement of an order is if the appeal would be useless or ineffective if the order is enforced before the appeal is determined.
- (c) Another factor which supports giving a stay is if the appellant's case is strong. When it is plain that an appeal is very weak and there are no real prospects of success and the appeal has been lodged simply in the hope of gaining a respite against immediate execution of the decision, a stay is likely to be refused.
- (d) If the order appealed against is to pay money, a factor which supports stopping enforcement is if the person asking for the stay can show by evidence, such as detailed financial records, that:
 - (i) if the money is paid to the other party, the other party probably could not repay the money if the appeal is successful;

OR

 - (ii) the person asking for the stay does not have enough money or other assets to pay the amount ordered to be paid and, if that amount is not paid, the other party is likely to bring bankruptcy (or winding up) proceedings against the person (or company) asking for the stay.
- (e) Another example of a factor which may support a stay order being made is if the person asking for the stay does not have enough money or other assets to pay the amount ordered to be paid and, if they do not pay, their contractor licence may be suspended under s 42A of the Home Building Act 1989 (NSW).
- (f) The Tribunal will look at the circumstances of both sides, not just the situation of the person asking for the stay, and may order a stay to stop enforcement if justice for both parties required it.
- (g) In doing justice for both parties, the Tribunal can require the person asking for the stay to pay money or do other things as a condition for ordering that enforcement be stayed. The Tribunal may also refuse or grant the stay but list the appeal for an early hearing.

56. In urgent cases, an interim stay can be ordered without hearing from the other party, but this will be only for a short time and the other party will be given an opportunity at a hearing to argue that the stay should not continue. If an interim stay is important, the appellant must lodge as much information to support it as possible with the Application for stay of original decision pending appeal. If enough information is not provided to support an interim stay, the Tribunal might not order one until it has heard from both parties.

57. Usually, a person asking for a stay will have to attend a hearing, provide evidence and make submissions to show why a stay order stopping enforcement should be made or continued. In practice, the person asking for a stay has to show to the Tribunal why it is appropriate for the Tribunal to stop enforcement of the decision appealed against. The other party will also have the opportunity to provide evidence and make submissions on why a stay order should not be made.

58. Even if a stay order has been made, the party which opposed the stay can apply to the Tribunal for the stay order to be discharged or set aside if circumstances have changed so that the stay is no longer appropriate or if the party that obtained the stay order has not complied with any conditions imposed when the stay was ordered.
59. If a party has not decided whether or not to appeal, the party may ask the original decision maker to suspend the operation of an order for a short period of time, so that the party can consider whether or not to appeal. The original decision maker may or may not suspend the operation of the order.

Directions for the conduct of the appeal

60. Except when the appeal is suitable to be dealt with “on the papers”, in general, within 28 days after acceptance by the Registry of the Notice of Appeal, the Appeal Panel will give notice of a directions hearing, also known as a “call over”.
61. The parties at a directions hearing will generally be required to address:
 - (a) the appropriate directions for the filing of submissions and other material to be relied upon in order to prepare the appeal for hearing;
 - (b) any preliminary matters (for example an application for an extension of time for filing of the appeal, an application for a stay of the orders appealed against or any other application for interim orders);
 - (c) whether the appeal is suitable for referral to mediation or another form of resolution process;
 - (d) a suitable date for the hearing of the appeal or application for leave to appeal.
62. One direction that is generally made is for the parties to provide the sound recording of the hearing where the decision that is appealed was made, and to type the relevant parts of what was said at the hearing, if they rely on what occurred. It is for the parties to decide whether they wish to do this or not. However, there are many decisions of the Appeal Panel where appeals failed because the appellant had decided not to provide the sound recording and typed copy of what was said, and then tried to rely on what was said at the hearing of the appeal.
63. To obtain the sound recording, a Request for sound recording, with payment of the relevant fee, should be sent to the Division of the Tribunal where the original decision was made.
64. Appeal directions hearings are generally conducted by audio visual link or by telephone.

Timetable and location

65. The parties are required to comply with any directions made for the filing and service of submissions and other material to be relied upon in order to prepare the matter for hearing.
66. If a hearing is to be conducted, a date for hearing will normally be fixed as part of the directions. Appeal Panel hearings will usually be listed for no more than half a day. If the Appeal Panel is considering whether to deal with the appeal “on the papers”, the directions may also include a timetable for submissions by the parties (see s 50(3) of the Act) on whether the appeal should be determined on the basis of written submissions without a hearing.

67. The venue for the Appeal Panel hearing will generally be Sydney, unless circumstances (including the convenience of all the parties) require a hearing in a different location.

Constitution of Appeal Panel

68. The Appeal Panel which hears any internal appeal will in most cases be made up of, or 'constituted by', one, two or three members. At least one of the members will usually be a lawyer. In any particular proceedings, the constitution of the Appeal Panel will depend on:
- (a) the degree of public importance or complexity of the subject-matter of the proceedings,
 - (b) the need for any of the members to have special knowledge or experience in the subject-matter of the proceedings,
 - (c) any applicable requirements in relation to the constitution of the Tribunal that are specified in the Act or in other legislation,
 - (d) other relevant considerations.

When hearing will be conducted

69. Often the appeal will be heard with both parties present (even if virtually by AVL or telephone) and making oral submissions. However, the Appeal Panel may decide to dispense with a hearing and proceed to decide an appeal "on the papers", that is, on the basis of the written material filed (see s 50(2) of the Act). An appeal will only be decided "on the papers" where the parties agree to that course or have had the opportunity to make submissions on whether a hearing is required and the Appeal Panel has decided that it is appropriate to do so.

Procedure at oral hearing

70. Where a hearing is conducted, the Appeal Panel will usually begin by checking that it has all the documents the parties were required to file.
71. However, fairness requires that each party must tell the other parties what material that party is going to rely upon in the appeal. This will include:
- (a) any material from the Tribunal file at first instance;
 - (b) any part of the sound recording or transcript of the proceedings at first instance; or
 - (c) any other submissions or material to be relied upon.

This is usually done by the party seeking to rely on that material providing it to the Tribunal and the other parties with the Notice of Appeal, with the Reply to Appeal or in accordance with a direction of the Tribunal for the filing and service of other material to be relied upon. If it is not provided to the Tribunal and the other parties in this way, the party may not be permitted to rely on that material at a hearing.

72. The material upon which the Appeal Panel will decide the appeal or application for leave to appeal will generally be the material in or attached to the Notice of Appeal or Reply to Appeal and any material filed and served in compliance with a direction given by the Appeal Panel.

73. The appellant will normally be invited first to explain their case. It is not necessary to repeat what has been covered in written submissions. The respondent will then be asked to reply. Again, it is not necessary to repeat the content of written submissions. The appellant will usually be given a brief opportunity to make any points in reply to the respondent's submissions.
74. If a party wishes to bring forward new evidence or the Appeal Panel decides to conduct a new hearing under s 80(3) of the Act, the Appeal Panel will make special directions and decide what procedure will be followed after hearing from the parties.
75. The Appeal Panel may give its decision orally at the end of the hearing or reserve its decision.

Costs

76. The general position is that the Appeal Panel applies s 60 of the Act when determining costs. Under s 60(1) each party is to pay its own legal costs except that, under s 60(2), if there are special circumstances warranting an award of costs, the Appeal Panel can order a party's costs to be paid by another party.
77. In appeals from decisions made in the Consumer and Commercial Division of the Tribunal, there are special rules for costs set out in Rules 38 and 38A of the Civil and Administrative Tribunal Rules 2014. The Appeal Panel applies whatever provisions relating to costs applied in the proceedings at first instance, as a result of the operation of Rule 38A.
78. If a party wishes to apply for an order that another pay its legal costs under s 60(2) of the Act or some other provision which permits costs to be awarded the party should indicate that in the Notice of Appeal (in the section dealing with orders sought) or in the Reply. Alternatively, a party should indicate to the Appeal Panel and the other parties in their written submissions lodged before the hearing that they intend to apply for a costs order and the basis for the application.
79. An application for costs should where possible be accompanied by a precise statement of the amount of costs actually sought and its components. This may assist to avoid further costs being incurred in assessing any costs awarded.
80. The Appeal Panel may hear submissions on costs during the hearing. Where it is not practical or appropriate to deal with a costs application during the hearing, the Appeal Panel will make directions as to the filing of submissions if an application for costs has been raised. The Appeal Panel may then decide to finalise the costs application without a further hearing.
81. Where appeals are to be decided "on the papers" the Appeal Panel will normally deal with any costs application as part of the decision.
